Grant Proposal 1: An Open Trust Network

Ray Dela Rama · My Open Manifesto · ray@provensuccess.org · Information as of November 2026

Vision. A world where everyone is kept safe, left free, treated fairly, and helped to grow, belong, and contribute by one another. In that world, moral good is the norm, and moral evil is unprofitable, unviable, and rare.

Moral good is knowingly giving someone else the truth, a free choice, a fair deal, and real help, even when it costs you, and doing it for their benefit. Moral evil is knowingly turning someone else's trust, weakness, fear, belongings, or body against them, without their free and fully informed yes.

The problem. Almost everyone has been lied to, cheated, used, or hurt on purpose, and many have watched that person get away with it. Moral evil is often rewarded: those who do it keep what they gain and face few consequences. One reason is that those dealing with strangers cannot see how those strangers have treated others before.

What I'm building. An open trust network. Members, whether people, businesses, AI, or robots, write signed entries about what happened between them and others. Any change or erasure would be visible to everyone, and anyone can read what others wrote about a member. Doing moral good can then earn more deals, better terms, and a better quality of life. Doing moral evil can lose its gain, its helpers, and its access. This is the first step. It aims to grow into a global network that makes the vision real, adding parts as the work shows what is needed.

The request. $10,000, over about 3 months, for:

1. A working prototype of the network's open record of entries.
2. A small group that I will recruit, such as food and beverage wholesalers and their buyers, who record their actual orders and deliveries on the network.
3. A public report of what happened, including how many people joined and what did not work.

The money covers my living costs so I can work full-time, AI tools and hosting, and a reserve, which may include legal and/or software reviews. I will report results, good or bad, before asking for more money.

Why me. In my structural engineering job, my boss privately asked me to make a failed structure appear to pass so we could get paid. I realized he cared only about the money, not the people who would die if it failed. I resigned instead. I faced many similar experiences in different places with different people in which I learned how the real world works. The common thing is moral evil. All the most painful problems I experienced are from the ripple effects of moral evil, which drew me to work on this project. I'm determined to make the vision a reality fast, and to build it so it outlasts me.

The main risk. The network only works if people check it before dealing. The first test is built to show whether they do, early and cheaply.

Fund me. Write to ray@provensuccess.org. I can receive funds as an individual, and I will set up an entity once the first test gives positive results.

For more detail: My Open Manifesto · Rough Timeline Plan